Lights, Camera, Action!

Funeral Home

I own a funeral home here in town, and one after another my caretakers are leaving—without notice. It's always so very unexpected! All of them become lethargic working here. It's terrible. They accomplish very little. And, again and again they come to me with family problems—of all kinds! Illness, conflict, even ghost stories.

I want my employees to be happy. I care for them. I appreciate them, and I want them to be happy. I want a great team. I feel sad that I can't support my workers. My business is at stake. This is such a mess!

Advice from Professor:

- Increase the salary for the position.

- Use the ribbon method—Worried About Someone—with the following differences:

  You will find Worried About Someone in Module 5, Kicked to the Curb, Special Agent Assignment #2.

  a. Have the funeral director place a nine-inch red ribbon under his pillow for 9 nights. Then he will cut it into one six-inch piece, and one three-inch piece. He will carry the six-inch piece, and the three-inch piece will remain in a safe place or in an employee's locker, etc. The director will visualize that both he and the employee are protected.

  b. The visualization should be very specific, and should include the director seeing himself, and his caretakers, in good health with strong chi. He will see everyone enjoying a loving and supportive family, and belonging to a powerful and effective work team. He will visualize that the entire team is connected, safe, and strong.

c. He will wrap the six-inch piece of ribbon around his ring finger, then wrap and unwrap it 9 times a day for 9 consecutive days. Be sure you tell him to do this once upon awakening, and once before going to bed. In this way he is securing the relationships and the benefits for everyone.

- Because of the nature of the employment, which may require added protection, Professor made the following suggestion:

  - In a conspicuous spot in the funeral home, hang two ceremonial bamboo flutes, the Five Buddha Firecrackers, and the Ten Coins as shown below.

  - The essence of the Ten Coins is the idea of fullness—having all the parts; nothing is lacking. These coins represent the entire fortune and power of the ten emperors of a complete dynasty—the Ch'ing Dynasty (1644-1911). The sequence is complete and in the proper order. You will find The Essence of the Ten Coins in this module.

  - The essence of the Five Buddha Firecrackers is power—the power to dramatically change the chi, enhance the chi, protect the chi, and calm and heal the chi. Use of the Firecrackers provides you with the strength to respond with discriminating accuracy even in the most dire, or unexpected circumstance. The support from the realm of the divine assures you that there is help available even when you feel most vulnerable. You will find The Essence of the Five Buddha Firecrackers in this Module.

This is a great example of getting right to the heart of the matter. Take note of Professor's mastery. He was not caught in a myriad of design details needing attention. If they exist, they will be easier to adjust when the chi is enhanced.

© Katherine Metz