
Clue Review

No Time for Sex

Clues that may hide the most important clue—leading you astray:

1. The bed sits back-to-back with the toilet suggesting possible illness. Yet no illness is evident.
2. The master bedroom sits in Helpful People suggesting that partners may travel, spending time apart. Yet, they love the time apart.
3. The "biting" doors between the two offices suggest time spent arguing. Their arguments are quickly dispatched, and there is no heart trouble.
4. The stove is out of command suggesting trouble with money. Along with the slider that opens to the outside from Wealth, double trouble is possible. Yet, money is not the problem here.
5. You run into obstacles everywhere. You have to begin to think there is something bigger than not having time for sex.
6. The bed is out of command and did contribute to some slight anxiety. It's a clue that something unexpected may have happened. But, what and to whom?

The clue that tells you everything:

The two bathrooms sitting directly on the Children gua suggest that the children are in trouble in some way. You have to ask about the children, even when there is no sign of children in the house! Were the children blindsided? Yes!

© Katherine Metz